TECHSTORY: PRAKASH JOSHI, COO, EPS, TALKS ABOUT FINANCIAL INCLUSION AND HOW EPS IS GOING TO REVOLUTIONIZE ATM AND PAYMENTS INDUSTRY

December 9, 2015.

Providing efficient banking services in a country like India with vast socio-economic disparities and geographic diversity is a challenge. The first step to inclusion is providing access to basic banking. Over the past decade, while the government has undertaken many measures and missions to expand the coverage of banks, it is the Pradhan Mantri Jan-Dhan Yojana (PMJDY) that has caught the attention of the average Indian. According to Finance Ministry, 55 percent of the 140 million cards issued under Jan Dhan are active. RBI's recent nod to payment banks is directed at taking financial inclusion to the next level, wherein the role of niche payment service providers like EPS will be well etched. In a bid to provide financial inclusion to all, the Ministry of Finance recently awarded EPS with a project to install 4300 ATMs in the state of Maharashtra.

TRANSFORMING BFSI LANDSCAPE : MANDATING FI UNDER JAM

December, 2015.

A survey has noted that combining the Jan Dhan Yojana, Aadhaar and Mobile numbers can help reduce the leakage of subsidies for a variety of commodities like rice, wheat, pulses, sugar kerosene, LPG, naptha, water, electricity, diesel, fertilizer, iron ore, railways, which the poor are unable to benefit. It points out that by December 2015 the total number of Aadhaar enrolments in the country is expected to exceed 1 billion (it stood at 720 million in December 2013) and that linking an Aadhaar Number to an active bank account is key to implementing direct income transfers to the poor.

To this, Mr. Thyagarajan Seshadri, Vice President - Banking Relations, EPS said, “If we look at the government’s approach, they are trying to provide social benefit schemes without any intermediary, Its schemes define leakages in the financial system, which can be fixed. Now as a way out, the government is opting for schemes wherein technology can play a large role. EPS has played a role where beneficiaries are identified and included in the mainstream through bank accounts”.

The Jan Dhan Yojana scheme aims to increase the number of bank accounts and is specifically targeted at the poor. India has over 900 million cell phone users and close to 600 million unique users (people with just one SIM), and in such a scenario mobile money can help deliver the direct transfer benefits to the poor. The way to reduce leakages in the PDS system is by increasing the direct transfer scheme, which can be utilised better if Aadhaar, Mobile and Bank accounts are linked more efficiently.
